Baltimore, Oct. 31.—The Monumental cotton building has been burned. Loss heavy.

Acquitted

[illegible], Oct. 30.—The trial of C. K. Allen formerly Union Pacific agent at Sidney, on the charge of grand larceny, terminated yesterday at Sidney in his acquittal. It will be remembered that some months ago $[illegible] in gold bullion and a small amount of currency received from the Black hills en route disappeared from his office in mid-day while he was at dinner. It had been taken through a hole in the floor. After some considerable search it was found hid in a coal pile under the office, except one brick and currency amounting altogether to $12,000. The evidence against Allen was very strong, but not strong enough to satisfy the jury, who were out about 78 hours before coming to an agreement of not guilty. The parties who took the money and hid it under the office, intended no doubt to come and get it at the first good opportunity.

Capture of Indians.

Fort Keogh, Oct. 30.—Capt. Higgins brought in Rain-in-the-Face and 350 hostiles. Sitting Bull sent word to Gen. Miles to hold a twelve days' tongue, as he was negotiating through Maj. Walsh with the Canadians to be taken on exhibition through the States and Canada.

A Long Line of Hogs.

Chicago, Oct. 30.—Pork packing of Chicago for the season ending last night was 5,330,000. It is ciphered that this would make an unbroken line of hogs from Portland, Maine, to Portland, Ogn.

Latest from the Utes

Cheyenne, Wyoming, Oct. 31.—A special to the Leader from the camp on White river says Agent Berry and party including Meacham of the Ute commission and four Utes, arrived there on the 28th direct from Los Pinos agency. They roughed it for several days as evidenced by their travel-stained appearance, Berry upon his own report is a much soiled individual. Colorow, the White river chief, is at White river with his camp. Berry arrived at [illegible] this morning and will go to Denver via [illegible].

WASHINGTON CITY.

A Habeas Corpus Case.

Washington, Oct. 30.—Chief Justice Cartter, of the supreme court of the District of Columbia, to-day, in the case of Sam'l L. Perry, a colored man, arrested on a requisition from North Carolina, where he is charged with forgery, announced his decision remanding the prisoner into the custody of the agent of North Carolina. Perry thereupon, by previous advice of counsel on both sides, immediately filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, alleging illegal detention, and asserting, among other things, that the requisition is insufficient and illegal; that he is not guilty of the alleged offense; that he has not fled the jurisdiction, and further believes his extradition is not sought in good faith, but because of his relation to political affairs, including the so-called negro exodus, and he believes if sent to North Carolina he will be in great bodily danger. Judge Wylie issued the writ returnable forthwith. The petition was presented to Judge Wylie who ordered a writ to be made returnable before him at the chambers forthwith. The agent of North Carolina specifically denied the allegations. A hearing of the case was postponed till Nov. 6th, and Perry was admitted to bail in the sum of $1000.

The Doyle Forgery Case.

[illegible] of the secret service returned from [illegible] where he went to interview Doyle. He says [illegible] U. S. six per cent. bonds of the issue of [illegible] the denomination of $1000 have been hypothecated by Brockway, Doyle et al, and some are now in hands of private individuals or banking institutions in this country and Europe as collateral. [illegible] Upton, acting secretary of the treasury, says there is no reason to suppose any of these coupon bonds or coupons have been paid by the treasury, but that they are most dangerous counterfeits and dealers in government securities should be on their guard.

Outstanding Currency.

Currency outstanding at this date, $[illegible].

Distilleries Seized.

[illegible] Clark, under date at Atlanta, Ga., telegraphs: Have seized within thirty days thirty illicit stills, two teams and about one thousand gallons illicit spirits. Nine of the distilleries were in the notorious Red Oak neighborhood. As soon as stills are torn out in that section others are at once set up and the illicit work resumed.

Railroad Inspectors Appointed.

Washington, Oct. 30.—The secretary of the interior has appointed A. B. Nichols engineer of the bureau of railroad accounts, Hoyt Sherman, of Iowa, and [illegible] Bloomfield, of New York, commissioners to examine a recently completed section of the Atlantic and Pacific railroad from Albuquerque fifty miles westward in New Mexico.

McBride vs Schurz.

Washington, Oct. 30.—In the Supreme court to-day case No. 707 was considered. It is entitled [illegible] Thomas McBride plaintiff, in error, vs. [illegible], Secretary of the interior. A motion was made by the Attorney general for an order to strike from the files on account of its scandalous character a pamphlet placed there by and purporting to be the remarks of Jos. H. Mandeville, counsel for plaintiff in error. In this cause the motion was argued by Assistant Attorney Smith in support of it and by Mr. Mandeville in opposition. Upon consideration the Court ordered that the pamphlet in question, purporting to be the brief of Mr. Mandeville of the counsel for the plaintiff in error, be stricken from the files of the Court. The passages to which the attention of the Court was especially called is one upon the Secretary of the Interior, who is described as an unrepentant [illegible] of Imperialism, a soldier of fortune, a [illegible] of his country and a fugitive from justice [illegible] from Germany to America upon a writ of [illegible].

Proclamation of Thanksgiving.

Washington, Oct. 31.—The following was issued by the president of the United States:

THE INFAMOUS FORGERY.

Review of the Testimony and its Results.

Proof that the Envelope was Mailed to and Delivered in New York, and Not at Lynn, Mass.—An Old Envelope, Originally Addressed to Another Person.

The Whole Forgery Made as Clear as Noonday.

New York, Oct. [illegible]—[illegible] the examination of Philp, charged with forgery of the Morey letter, [illegible] Hart, the owner of Truth, [illegible] the envelope in which the letter is alleged to have been received was then shown by the prosecution. [illegible] the stamp of Washington Post Office. In the [illegible] stamps of the New York Post Office, [illegible] dates are, however, indistinct. It is impossible [illegible] in the photo-lithograph [illegible] Morey [illegible]. It was shown by the assistant postmaster in the New York Post office, by James Gaylor, superintendent of the city delivery, and by Mr. Richards, in immediate charge of that department, that the New York stamp on the envelope was used upon all letters received here intended for delivery [illegible] in New York city, and that such was never placed upon letters merely passing through this city; that the second New York stamp is placed upon letters received at the [illegible] from the general Post Office [illegible] district of the sub-station. It [illegible] absolutely certain from the envelope, when it passed through the mail, was posted at Washington and addressed to some one in New York city. Moreover, it was [illegible] the postmaster and head clerk [illegible] that the letter posted in Washington [illegible] purporting to have been [illegible] Lynn could not under any circumstances [illegible] into the New York Post Office, [illegible] the stamp of that Post Office. [illegible] shown by the New York stamps, [illegible] that the [illegible] showing on what day the envelope was received at New York, and that it must have been received either on the 12th or 22d of some unknown month. It could not, therefore, [illegible] in the mail, [illegible] contained the Morey letter, which is dated January 23d. It is therefore absolutely shown by witnesses who can not be contradicted, and whom the defense did not even cross-examine, that the Morey letter having been forged, was [illegible] to be inserted in an old envelope addressed to some one in New York City, and not to Morey nor any one else in Lynn. Erasure of the name of the person to whom it was originally addressed, is distinctly visible to the naked eye, and immediately precedes the, still decipherable word "Esq." Erasures of dates are equally plain. It was, moreover, testified by Mr. Leet, under whom Philp worked for a long time, that it was his confirmed habit to spell "companies" "compaynes" precisely as it is spelled in the Morey letter. Leet also testified that the Morey letter was in Philp's writing, and that he (Leet) as stated before he has heard it suggested that Philp was ever suspected.

New York, Oct. 3[illegible].—There was an immense crowd of spectators at the examination of Philp this morning. At 11 o'clock Judge Davis ordered the doors of the court room closed. The police had great difficulty preserving order so closely was the room packed. District Attorney Bell asked for additional time for the attendance of [illegible] witnesses from Washington, whereupon Howe, for the defense said: "In order that no time may be lost we ask you to allow us to call to the stand the witnesses from Washington. These gentlemen are George Wedderburn, Mayor Hallett and Wm. Wilson, by whom it is expected to prove the genuineness of the letter, from examinations they have made, with documents written by Gen. Garfield, on file in Washington."

Bell objected, saying counsel would have plenty of time during the day to examine them.

Howe—With that I am satisfied.

Daniel T. Ames, expert, was recalled by the prosecution and testified: I have examined the Morey envelope with exhibits A to K, and the handwriting is similar. It does not resemble exhibits one and two (Rockwell's and Jewell's letters). The handwriting on the Morey envelope is the work of the same man who wrote exhibits marked A to K.

Cross-examined—I know Geo. Simpson, Jr. I do not regard him as an expert. He is simply a copyist.

Bell then asked the indulgence of the court for a few minutes, saying his associate counsel with witnesses from Washington were expected every moment.

W. A. Chanser testified, I have been cancel clerk in the Washington postoffice all this year. The cancel stamp on the forged letter has not been used in our office this year. The stamp used was a combination stamp, marking postage stamp and giving date at the same time. The stamp on the Morey letter is made I should think by a steel stamp. I am not able to say if the affixed office cancellation stamp on the envelope was not used January last. It was first used about the middle of February. Witness produced the form of stamp used prior to February. Continuing he testified (producing stamp used after February) the use of stamps was discontinued about the 15th of February, and these were then put in use.

Cross-examined: Col. D. B. Ainger is postmaster at Washington. I have seen the statement made by him in the newspapers recently; He is my superior; I don't know that he caused the statement to be published that the change of stamps I have referred to was made April 15th. I never heard such statement.

Col. D. B. Ainger testified: I have been postmaster in the city of Washington since January 13th last; I never saw the Morey envelope; The cancelling stamps in the postoffice have not been the same since I was appointed; the stamps in use now were not in use January last; the change was made in February; The stamp upon the Morey letter was not in use in the office January last, at least not after the 13th. I examined the stamp on it and others; sent for my assistant postmaster and directed him to ascertain the exact time at which the stamps were changed and it was in February; I then went to the man who made the stamps and he informed me he was paid on the 13th, but that he had delivered the stamps some time before. The new stamps were first put in use between the 15th and 16th of February.

Judge Davis again took a seat on the bench at 2 o'clock. Philp was present. A lady attracted much attention. Some delay ensued after opening the court. Mr. Bell for the prosecution asked as the delay was not of their seeking that he be permitted to call Joseph E. Payne as a witness. The court consented, and Payne testified the Morey letter and the envelope were in the same handwriting as that on the manuscript of the editorial "Lying and [illegible]," published in Truth. The editorial, [illegible] was written by Philp.

District Attorney Bell then called Colonel Bliss to the stand. He testified: I am the complainant, and I received the Rockwell letter as a comparison; I saw it in the morning of the 24th. I saw the Jewell letter was selected because it was desired to have one that could be photographed with the Jewell letter, and because it was almost nearest in date to the alleged Morey letter.

Cross-examined—I saw all the papers in the case, or nearly all; I saw the exhibits, but did not know they were stolen; I asked if it came directly through the hands of Louis J. Post, and I was informed that it did not.

Mr. Bell then stated that he rested the case, reserving the privilege, however, of calling, as a witness, expert [illegible], and the Lynn postmaster.

The defence then began. Several proofreaders and the city editor of the Brooklyn Eagle testified that the Morey letter was not in the writing of Philp. John I. Davenport testified that Mr. Carrigan, private detective, first gave him the editorial manuscript of "Lying and Stealing To R[illegible]." He did not say where he got it, nor did witness pay him for it.

Cross-examined—Never attempted to steal or get possession of the Morey letter in any way. Had not been in Truth office more than a month, and then at the request of Mr. Post.

Two Lynn workmen testified they knew of the organization named "employers' union," or something like that, but knew little or nothing about it.

The testimony of W. [illegible] Colton was first ruled out, but finally received when it should be shown that it contradicted Mr. Gaylor's claims that such letters were not so stamped. No cross-examination.

The prosecution objected this evidence contradicted nothing, because Gaylor's testimony only related to letters from Washington to the east.

The Forgery Confessed.

New York, Oct. 31.—Judge A. J. Dittenhoeffer, a prominent lawyer of this city and the attorney of the Truth newspaper since its establishment, publishes to-day in the New York papers a letter in which he states that on two occasions the proprietors of that paper have admitted to him that the Morey letter was a forgery, and sought his advice as to the [illegible] of Truth in the matter, [illegible] and admitting that it had been imposed upon, and making such reparation as they could. Judge Dittenhoeffer advised them to do so, and the owner, Mr. Hart, promised to publish [illegible] Wednesday the following: "[illegible] the publication of Gen. Garfield's explicit denial we are in doubt as to the authenticity of the Morey letter." This was to be followed up by a full and complete retraction of the libel.

MARSHALL JEWELL.

Jewell's Statement Confirmed

New York, Oct. 31.—Judge A. J. Dittenhoeffer confirms Jewell's statement in all points. He says he went [illegible]

[illegible] Hart [illegible] I asked what for. He said it was [illegible] more for the credit if they are informed of the fact that we are going to do it voluntarily, and said he we want it understood that we want to give it without any other consideration, but want it understood, as our counsel and friend should say, the [illegible] it is a great service and if anybody gets any benefit from it, it [illegible] to one person. I was convinced that every [illegible] was right and I wanted it understood they would [illegible] to do the thing quietly. I went up to see Governor Jewell and repeated substantially what was said. I told him [illegible] done it without any hope of any consideration, but would be pleased if they knew I would receive the credit for having brought about the publication of the retraction. Governor Jewell said "that is fair and decent and I will be glad to assure them you will be regarded as a person who was instrumental in having them publicly acknowledge they were convinced of the spuriousness of the letter." He then wrote the letter which has been published and said you may show them the letter. I got down about two. Post was present and when I asked for him Hart said he was busy and I could not see him. Hart said, Did you see Jewell? I said yes and showed the letter to him. Mr. Hart after reading it said, Are you satisfied? I said yes, completely. He said, but it specifies nothing, I wish nothing. I said, I am completely satisfied. If you are satisfied, I am, he said, and I was on the point of leaving when he said, Can't you leave the letter and let me show it to Post? I said I was only instructed to show it and not to leave it. He said, Can't you trust us? Have we ever done anything to hurt you, and what harm can come of it? I consented and now acknowledge that this was an error, but I considered the warm personal relations between Post and myself, and the thought did not cross my mind that he was capable of acting treacherously. After having left the letter I began to feel a little uneasy without being able to say why, and was anxious that Jewell should hear from Hart that the latter would retract. He arranged a meeting and Hart then said to Jewell: "I am not satisfied with that letter of yours. I want to be satisfied that the judge after election will be recognized and want a letter or telegram from Gen. Garfield." The thought then, for the first time, darted across my mind that he might have some sinister motive, and at once, in a loud voice, so that all would hear, said: "Governor, I am satisfied and I want no other promise." Hart replied, "well, if you are satisfied I can't help it." I then left the room, and the governor and his secretary and Mr. Hart were alone for nearly an hour. Just as they were going out I re-entered, and Mr. Hart, in the presence of Mr. Jewell, made a direct promise that while he could not, the next morning, make a complete somersault he would see that an article appeared substantially as follows: "Since the publication of Mr. Garfield's explicit denial we have been led to investigate the matter further and are still pursuing investigation, with some doubts as to the authenticity of the letter. If we find we have been deceived, we will boldly declare it, as we have heretofore mentioned it was a genuine document." Wednesday morning I visited Mr. Hart who said: "I think we are going to hurt ourselves very much by doing this, but never mind, as I have made a promise we will stick to it." Imagine my surprise when I saw in Wednesday's newspaper a reiteration of the libelous letter. I now have come to the conclusion that Mr. Hart was all the time playing a deep game, knowing I had no reasons to suspect him or Mr. Post, and recognizing my position in the party, was scheming to procure through me something that would look like a bribe as a consideration for making the retraction, and would then publish it as evidence of the genuineness of the Chinese letter. During Wednesday rumors came to me that they were going to publish a facsimile of Gov. Jewell's letter. I hunted for Post and found him about 7 o'clock, dining with Hart. After upbraiding them for what they had done I said, "Are you really going to publish that Jewell letter? It certainly will not hurt Gen. Garfield, Gov. Jewell or his party, but its tendency will be to place me in a false position." Hart said, "If you will have the prosecution against Philp stopped, I will not publish the letter." I answered, "I would not do that if I could, and I could not if I would; that I would not allow myself to be used for any such purpose." He left and I followed him, leaving Mr. Post and my brother behind. I again appealed to him in the street not to do such an unjust and unkind thing to me. He replied, "All is fair in war, it's business." I returned to Mr. Post and he promised me he would use all his power for my sake, not to publish the letter, which he admitted would harm no one but me.

Wide-Spread Disgust.

New York, Oct. 30.—The Sun of to-day expressed disgust over the Garfield-Morey forgery, while itself supporting the Hancock ticket. Its disgust is shared by the great body of respectable democrats here, who bemoan the fact that it has damaged their cause, and admit it ought to do so. They point to the fact that the origin of the publication is the most disreputable sheet in town; the Hart who was put forward as publisher, is a negro minstrel, and that the illiterate English puppet Philp is defended by the rebel General Roger A. Pryor, instead of any of the well-known democratic lawyers here of loyal antecedents and admitted respectability, and finally that many of the points in the defence of the forgery abundantly sustain Garfield. All these, together with Barnum's small tricks as that of telegraphing to the country Hart's release from arrest for contempt of court as a vindication of the forgery crowd so shames honorable democrats with their party that they are heard hourly announcing their purpose to rebuke such management by voting for Garfield. These are simple and well-attested facts.

Barnum's Botching.

New York, Oct. 30.—Barnum's committee has telegraphed to many newspapers in California and elsewhere an affidavit signed by the minstrel Joseph Hart with the letter of Marshall Jewell to Garfield, for the purpose of charging Jewell with attempting by bribery to suppress the proofs of the genuineness of the Morey letter. Jewell, being interviewed, denounces the affidavit as a tissue of falsehood, and says his letter to Garfield, which is perfectly proper in itself, was secured by Hart, through arrant trickery, for fraudulent purposes, or the betrayal of confidence on part of Hart's attorney, Dittenhoeffer, who, as an active German republican speaker in this campaign, under the auspices of the national committee, enjoyed the fullest confidence of Jewell and associates. On Tuesday Dittenhoeffer told Jewell he had been attorney for the Truth newspaper since its organization, and, as such attorney, secured to ask an interview between Jewell and Hart. That Hart and his associates, while professing to the public to believe the Chinese letter as genuine, were, in fact, convinced to the contrary, and that it was a forgery and had proposed to make a retraction of the charges already published. Jewell believing such retraction by the paper, one of whose editors had forwarded the letter, would be its most effective denial, met Hart, as requested, at Dittenhoeffer's office, Thursday afternoon, and stated that nothing but unqualified retraction would be satisfactory. Hart endeavored to secure Jewell's promise, accompanied by a letter to Garfield, that this retraction by the paper would secure the abandonment of proceedings against Kenward Philp, the alleged forger. This Jewell flatly refused, but insisted that the forger would be punished to the full extent of the law. Hart then offered to publish a retraction on condition that Dittenhoeffer should have the benefit of securing the same if any benefit was to be derived therefrom by anybody. To this Jewell had no objection, and at the earnest request of Dittenhoeffer and Hart wrote the letter to Garfield and gave it to Dittenhoeffer's possession. How Hart subsequently obtained it for publication Dittenhoeffer is expected to explain to-night. It is now apparent that Hart's purpose in seeking the interview was to secure from Jewell through Dittenhoeffer a letter which should compromise both Jewell and Garfield, and which he would publish as an offer of a bribe. The cautious phraseology of the letter, however, excludes that interpretation of it and its publication has fallen flat. No proposition looking to the abandonment of Philp's prosecution has been entertained for a moment.

Comparisons by an Expert.

The Times' special from Boston regarding the Philp trial and the Morey letter says James F. Babcock of this city writes to an evening paper that the figures on the envelope which purports to have contained this now famous epistle are such figures as might naturally be made on any old scrap of paper, or to have been intentionally placed there by some one to give the envelope the appearance of age, probably the latter, as he says [illegible] the fact that they occur in several places where there have been erasures, which they are intended to conceal. He carefully explained which [illegible] a photograph of the envelope of the Morey letter shows a very remarkable resemblance between these figures and those in the date [illegible]

Treatment and Effect of the Forgery.

Who Was Morey's Mother?

HOW BARNUM GETS AFFIDAVITS.

The way he Operated on Old Mrs. Morey of Lynn—She Exposes his Falsehoods and High-Toned Methods of Electing a President.

[illegible] She told the stranger that she could not sign any paper until George O. Tarbox had seen it and declared it all right. She would sign any paper as requested. Barnum's agent secured Mr. Tarbox, the justice of the peace, and the paper was made up as printed, with the exception of the forgery mentioned above. This emissary hired Mrs. Morey to keep silent on this money question until after the election, and this is the reason she would not say anything, except that furnished above. The man wanted George O. Tarbox, justice of the peace, to keep quiet until after the election, and when he left Tarbox's store he threw the money on the counter.

Imposition on Old Age and Poverty.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—The Tribune's Boston special says: Mrs. Morey is a pauper, not very intelligent, and consequently a woman on whom the representations of Barnum's agent and his money made a great impression. She was willing to sign the affidavit without inquiring too closely into its intent. Mr. Tarbox was defrauded because the original affidavit bore "name" only "Mr. Morey," while as now it reads "Mr. H. L. Morey." Tarbox, who is a reputable attorney, was quick to denounce the forgery when he became aware of it.

DENVER UNDER MOB RULE.

Chinamen Killed and their Houses Gutted.

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

Denver, Oct. 31.—Denver has been in the hands of a mob for eight hours, and there are now fully fifteen hundred rioters in the streets. The trouble has been growing for days. It was discovered a week ago that there were fully 800 illegal names registered in this city, and immediately afterward the streets were filled with strangers of the worst character. Ever since the publication of the forged Garfield letter, violent partisans have striven to make an issue of the Chinese question, and the democratic press has been filled with articles asserting that as soon as Garfield was elected the state would be flooded with Chinese, and all white labor driven out.

Saturday night the democrats had a procession carrying transparencies, inscriptions and cartoons tending to excite animosity against the Chinese. A considerable portion became intoxicated and remained out all night. This noon they made an assault on the Chinese houses, tearing down the houses and beating and driving out the Chinese. One was dragged from Hop Lee's place with a rope about his neck, and his skull crushed in with boots and bricks. The police were called out, but were unable to control the mob. The fire department was ordered to throw water on the rioters, but the mob attacked them and badly wounded two firemen. Many Chinamen were fearfully beaten, and one was rescued by the police and taken to jail, which was immediately surrounded by a mob of about a thousand, who hurrahed for Hancock and yelled, "Lynch the leper." Special police managed to keep back the crowds. The other mob remained mostly in the lower part of the city. About dark they were entirely beyond control, and marched from street to street, gutting China houses wherever they saw them, and assaulting citizens. On Lawrence street from an isolated tenement a Chinaman was seen dragged, his ears cut off and otherwise terribly mutilated. He was finally rescued in a dying condition, placed in a carriage and driven towards the city jail. At Sixteenth street an unsuccessful effort was made to drag him from the wagon. Several are reported killed, but the condition of the streets is such that it is impossible at this hour to get definite reports. Many reliable men were knocked down and beaten. At this hour rioters are still out the streets in full force. Special police have been sworn in to the number of 304. There is a great deal of incendiarism to-night. The fire department has been called to be ready at the slightest warning.

The reports of pistols are heard all over town and the militia will be called out. Threats have been freely made that the Tribune office would be sacked; but though the mob have been howling across the street from it, no attack has been made as yet. Citizens irrespective of party are intensely indignant. The transparencies carried in the democratic procession Saturday night were directed at the Chinese and this with constant repetition of the Garfield forgery are causes of the mob. There is a dangerous night ahead. The Chinese population here cannot exceed 150 all told, and from the beginning of this disgraceful riot not a single incident is reported of any one of them having resisted the onslaught.

How to Pacify the South.

Nasby has published a proclamation setting forth the wrongs endured by the south, and the painful necessities that exist for the conciliation and pacification of that solid section in these terms:

When the south wanted to extend slavery over the territories the trouble began. To hev stopped it then wood hev bin an easy thing. All the north hed to do wuz to withdraw its opposition, and let the south alone.

When the north nominated the feend Linkin the south pertested. Ef the north hed heeded that pertest, and let Breckinridge hev gone in, all the trouble would hev been avoided.

When the south pertested agin the rane uv Linkin, and fired upon Fort Sumpter, the north cood hev avoided war by letting the south alone. But, ez it bent upon trouble, it raised armies and opposed the south.

[illegible] the bloody and fratricidle struggle the south wuz willin at any time to end it, but the north wuz in the way. It refused to lay down its arms and finally the beautiful south hed to submit.

Even at this late day the south is still willin to forgive, even if it can't forget.

The way is simple. All the north hez to do is to repair the damages done by its hard-hearted and stiffnecked doings. Let Garfield be withdrawn from the field, and let Hancock hev a walk-over. Let the south control the government ez it [illegible] to.

There can't be no true [illegible]

With the entire north in [illegible] with the south, there wood be [illegible]

Southern Sentiment.

The New York World and a great many other democratic papers keep standing matter in their columns a score or so of democratic [illegible]. Here are a few democratic mottoes copied from standard democratic authorities:

Put on your red shirts, and let the side begin.—Abbeville (S. C.) Sentinel.

Consider what Lee and Jackson would do if they were alive.—Wade Hampton.

This confederate house is not friendly to the union soldier.—Ryan, of Pennsylvania.

With a rebel general at the head of the senate committee on pensions there would be no use pressing your bill.—Beltzhoover.

Let the Mississippi plan be adopted throughout the south.—Senator Butler.

The north pays the taxes, but what do we care if it does.—Senator Vance.

Whatever the character of the voting, the democratic candidates are sure to come out on top when the counting is finished.—Charleston News and Courier.

The negro will be a slave again.—[illegible] Mercury.

No true southerner ever asked pardon for bearing confederate arms.—J. B. Gordon.

New York, [illegible] very few intelligent democrats now [illegible] that Garfield will carry New York [illegible]

The Pros and Cons—Three to One for Garfield.

Washington, Oct. 31.—A dispatch was received at Gen. Denver's headquarters in this city from the California democratic committee saying, "California is safe for Hancock; how is New York?" A cheering response was sent. On the other hand, a dispatch to this evening's Star, from its conservative and usually well informed correspondent in New York city, says: "Leading democrats here admit it is conceded that New York state will go republican by perhaps a larger majority than Platt's estimate of 30,000." The Star's correspondent also telegraphs: "The pool rooms are active, but the best bets that can be obtained on the general result of the presidential election are $300 on Hancock to $1000 on Garfield."

Latest from New York.

New York, Oct. 31.—The latest estimate from the republican state committee are that they will come down to Harlem river with 40,000 majority and the democrats will not have in the five counties south more than 60,000 majority. Gen. Grant expressed the opinion to-day that New York would go republican by 50,000.

Democratic Organization.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—The editor of a leading democratic journal in southern Indiana said to-day: I admit that the democrats have secret organizations in every school district and voting precinct in the state, but their sole object is to make our political organization more perfect. Every member is sworn to get at least one vote, and it has worked like a charm.

More Prognostications.

Chicago, Oct. 31.—The Times says: Connecticut, according to best advices, will give Garfield a small majority. English will make a hot contest for the governorship. Phelps, democratic candidate for congress in the second district, has the lead; the fourth is doubtful, and the first and third will go republican. The Ohio republican managers announce that no damage has been done by the Morey letter.

Among the converts to Garfield are a nephew of General George Morgan and W. H. Whitely secretary of the democratic committee of Hancock county.

The Times' New York correspondent has met many intelligent democrats who believe they will lose both the state and country. Republicans high and low are expecting a sweeping victory.

Side Items.

Columbus, Oct. 31.—The republican state committee reports no damage done by the Morey forgery. Among the converts to Garfield are Morgan [illegible], of New York, nephew of Gen. Geo. Morgan, and W. H. Whitely secretary of the democratic committee of Hancock county.

Senator Thurman's son says he has given up all hope of Hancock's election.

Attended by the Doctors.

New York, Oct. 31.—Gen. Hancock accorded a hearty welcome to 150 members of the Bellevue medical college. To them Gen Hancock spoke as follows: I am very glad to see from your presence here that you take an interest in defense of our institutions, in the welfare of the country and preservation of constitutional government. Your best efforts should be directed toward maintaining the purity of the ballot. By doing so you will take the best steps toward preserving your liberties. It is therefore of the highest importance to see if you cannot compel the officeholders now in power to relinquish their seats. If you do not unseat them now you may never be able to do so. If successful in your attempts, an examination of the books of several government departments should necessarily follow, and if the present incumbents should have been true to their trust, the country may at a future period reinstate them. When we examine the books of an establishment we naturally do not use bookkeepers who made the entries, but employ experts. This course should be adopted in connection with government accounts, and in ordinary periods when expenses are comparatively light, people may not think a change of officials necessary, but in a [illegible] war such as we have had, since which time one party only has held office and has had control of millions of money, it is well to have an examination of the books of the public property to ascertain if we really have what we are represented to have. This is the duty of the hour, and now I will give you all an opportunity to express your opinion." An introduction of all the students to the general followed. "I wish you had a brighter day for your visit," he remarked in interchange of courtesies, "with the 3d of next month we will show a brighter day," was observed in reply, "than we have had in this country for many years, and they will grow brighter for the next four years, with you at the helm at the White House." "In a few days we shall know all about that," replied the general. The delegation retired like previous visiting bodies, giving three cheers for General Hancock.

About two hundred and fifty students of the medical and academic classes of the university of New York visited Governor's Island to pay their respects to General Hancock. The young men were received at headquarters. When General Hancock entered the room, Thomas Courtney, spokesman for the party, stepped to the front of his company and delivered an address in which he wished the General [illegible] on Tuesday next. General Hancock spoke as follows: "I feel honored by your [illegible] I have always endeavored to do my duty to the best of my ability in the various positions in which I have been placed in public service, but further than that I claim no credit. In a few days it will be the day of judgment for all of you, and whatever that judgment shall be, let it be good. [illegible] we will bow to it, and to whatever duty comes to us.

A hundred men from the British [illegible] Works, of Cleveland, next appeared, a delegation of infantry and cavalry from [illegible] undaunted by the rain, who [illegible] guards formed into two columns in the meadow opposite the house, and Gen. Garfield, in a carriage, received them. There was great enthusiasm.

Will Vote for Gaston.

Boston, Oct. 30.—The anti-Leopold [illegible] committee of democrats of the fourth congressional district refused to accept Gaston's declination, and his name will be placed on the ticket, [illegible] democratic nominees.

Resigned.

Damariscotta, Maine, Oct. 30.—Edwin Flynn, republican elector, has resigned as president and director of the First National Bank, learning that the democrats proposed to enter an objection to his acting in case he was elected.

Indications from Missouri.

St. Louis, Oct. 30.—The republicans had a monster meeting to-night to contest for city officers, and in three congressional districts will be very sharp and republicans are hopeful.

Politics and Roughs.

St. Louis, Oct. 31.—At 11 o'clock to-night a white man and a negro quarreled at a political meeting and the white man struck the negro and was arrested. While being taken out of the crowd a pistol was fired and an old negro named Brown shot dead. A number of negroes belonging to one of the clubs in attendance at the meeting supposing a policeman fired the shot, ran him into a saloon. Great excitement immediately prevailed and a number of shots were fired into the crowd and four or five men wounded. The crowd scattered in all directions, the meeting was broken up and greatest excitement existed until a large force of police appeared and restored order.

It is now asserted that the trouble began by a brick being thrown into a crowd of negroes, one of whom was struck. The negroes then rushed towards a saloon on the corner of Twelfth and Locust streets, under the belief that the brick was thrown from that point. On arriving at the saloon they were confronted by three policemen who prevented them from entering. They began throwing rocks at the saloon, breaking its windows and shutters, whereupon one policeman discharged a pistol in the air as a call for help. Promiscuous firing then commenced, during which old man Brown was killed and Policeman Slattery struck on the head by a rock, severely injuring him. The negroes say Brown was killed by the policeman who fired the shot in the air, but this is denied. So far as can be ascertained only one person was killed and Policeman Slattery and a negro wounded.

St. Louis, Oct. 31.—The exact origin of the row at the republican meeting last night is still in doubt, but it does not appear that there was any concerted purpose or action to break up or seriously disturb the meeting. There were a good many negroes in the procession, and at the meeting they had been hooted at and otherwise provoked by a lot of unruly fellows. During the march this was kept up. After they arrived at the meeting, some of them resented it by using their torches over the heads of some of their assailants. This led to throwing stones and other missiles at the negroes, and then the fight began. The negroes still insist that Brown was killed by a policeman but there is no evidence to prove it. The only man killed was Brown, but perhaps a dozen more were more or less injured by the policemen's clubs when the latter charged on the crowd. Jas. Simmonds, a negro, had his skull fractured and will probably die. John Weyman, white man, was shot in the hand. Several others were pounded and bruised with clubs and torches. Policeman Slattery whose upper jaw was shattered is in a critical condition.

Registration in New Orleans.

New Orleans, Oct. 30.—The registration in this city to date is 30,193, an increase of only 555 since the 23d, including over 200 colored voters registered this week.

Tennessee Politics.

Nashville, Oct. 30.—It is generally conceded that the vote will be very close between Hawkins, republican, and Wright, debt-paying democrat. Very few bets have been made.

MONDAY MORNING, NOV. 1, 1880.

EXPOSURE OF THE FRAUD.

[illegible] ... forgery ... [illegible] ... it perfectly transparent ... [illegible] ... Barnum ... [illegible] ... in pursuance of the ... [illegible] purpose. Barnum continues to send at the expense of ... telegrams each day to papers of the lowest class in Oregon, California and Nevada in which he distorts ... the forgery ... in support of his allegations that the letter was written by General Garfield. It seems to be thought that this will be a great card for the election. But the man who is so narrow a fool as to take interest in and believe it may be counted on as surely democratic in any event. No man of intelligence and dignity is moved, except to disgust, by so low an effort.

As the statements on all sides are so contradictory as to Morey, it may be doubted whether such person ever existed. But there may be among the conspirators a person kept in concealment who is called by that name. When Barnum began his telegraphing, he asserted that the so-called letter had been found among the papers of H. L. Morey of Lynn, Mass., lately deceased there. He has since sent a telegram purporting to furnish an affidavit from Morey's mother at Lynn to the effect that her son, H. L. Morey had visited her frequently at that place where she had resided for many years, up to eleven months ago, since which time she had known nothing of his whereabouts. But Barnum's first telegrams asserted that H. L. Morey had died at Lynn, and that the finding of the letter was attested by the administrator who had settled the affairs of his estate. Now the letter purports to have been written to Morey at Lynn from Washington on the 23d January last. In the first place, it is not eleven months since then; in the second place, if he had died there his mother would have been likely to know it; and in the third place, if an administrator had closed up his estate she would probably know something of that too. There is another dispatch to-day from the Boston Herald, an independent journal, which gives an affidavit from Mrs. Clara S. Morey of Lynn, who was named in Barnum's dispatch as the mother of H. L. Morey, in which she makes oath that she never had a son of that name. But fortunately proof of the conspiracy and forgery does not depend on any sifting of these contradictions. The evidence as telegraphed from New York and published Saturday and to-day settles it conclusively in a direct way.

That evidence proves that the letter was never mailed from Washington to Lynn, because the envelope has not the Lynn delivery mark on it; because the Washington mark on it is the mark of a stamp not in use at Washington at the time it is claimed that the letter was mailed there; because it has on it two marks or stamps in use at the New York delivery office; and finally, because the envelope is proven to have covered a letter originally mailed at Washington and delivered at New York to a person of another name, which name microscopic experts testify has been erased, and the name "H. L. Morey" written over it—the word "Esq." of the former name still being plainly visible on a line above the word "Morey." It was shown also by the microscopic examination that the stamps of the New York office had been partially erased and a date altered. Erasure of the name of the person to whom it was originally addressed is plainly visible to the naked eye, and immediately precedes the still decipherable word "Esq." Observe that this is the testimony given under oath before the court by experts. It is a revelation of the whole infamy. Nothing has been offered to rebut this evidence, for it is evidence that nothing can meet.

The conclusion, then, is positive and irresistible that this letter was forged in New York; that it was inserted in an envelope that had covered a letter actually written from Washington to New York, but more recently than January last, as the Washington stamp upon it is the mark of a stamp introduced since then; that the name of the person to whom it was addressed at New York had been erased, and the man "H. L. Morey" written instead; and the New York stamps upon it had been subjected to an operation which had been partially obliterated but still left them in recognizable form. After this it is a matter of small consequence whether there be any such person as H. L. Morey or not. The forgery is established and the weight of testimony indicates that Philp was the forger. But even if the full proof necessary to convict him in a court of law should be wanting, the forgery remains proven by the amplest testimony. If he did not execute it, some one else did. The envelope alone tells a story that no one can gainsay. Beyond this, comparison of the pretended letter with the genuine Garfield letters produced for the purpose shows in the opinion of all the experts that the writing is not Garfield's.

This most contemptible fraud and crime is the lowest thing ever yet attempted in a national election. Barnum has hoped to carry the Pacific States by it. It is beyond belief that so miserable a fraud, appealing with a satanic energy to ignorance and prejudice, in the assumption that the controlling motive with men is elsewhere than in their intelligence, can have any real weight. Barnum can scarcely catch any whom he did not have before.

THE PHILP PARTY.

It has long been the opinion of not a few observers who look below the surface of things that the political organization known as the democratic party would never win another national victory. The reasons for the opinion are many, but they may in general be summed up in the odium that attaches to the party for its stupendous blunders. It opposed the war for national preservation; it fought reconstruction; it attacked the constitutional settlements of the war and attempted to undo them; it adopted the fiat money craze; it opposed resumption and struggled to repeal the resumption act; it perpetrated the follies of the late extra session of congress, and first and last has done no end of other wrong and unpardonable things. These acts cannot be called crimes, perhaps, because the law does not take cognizance of them as such, though the acts are all of a class which might fall within the definition of "mala in se"—things bad or wrong in themselves. But in politics blunders may be worse than crimes—that is worse in their effect upon the offending party. The name of the democratic party has become a load too heavy ... There are few candid persons who would ... that this party embraces more than a very moderate share of the ... [illegible] ... has become through long use and association a symbol of its character. That is, when the democratic party is named ... of its many blunders, of the ... that compose it, of the purposes it sets before it, of its past history, its present tendencies, its irreclaimable persistence in wrong doing, and its long course of pig-headed opposition to everything which the country has decreed as essential to the public welfare for the past twenty-five years. All this rises up to condemn it. Herein are reasons which, in the judgment of many, will prevent the party known as the democratic from ever winning another national victory. It may, indeed, as now constituted and led, answer the purpose of an opposition party in local contests in various parts of the country; but when it comes to a national struggle it does not fulfill expectations ... public confidence. It has ... too many blunders, and it has in it too large a share of ... whose ... and destructive ... public interests ...

No one ... suppose that it could change its nature ... by changing its name. And yet a change of name might ... attention, a name which through long use and association has come to be regarded by multitudes as synonymous with ... and everything that ... and destructive ... to another, it has ... forgery appears now to embrace ... and express ... and as all its efforts for the past ten days have been ... upon this forgery, it might now with great propriety take the new name it has so long wanted. It would call itself the Philp party. It would then get rid of the odious name which the people appear determined never to tolerate, and take a new name if not more in harmony with what is understood to be its general character, at least more completely expressive of the present state of the great issues and objects which it has set before it. This change is to be recommended, too, on the general ground that the case is one under which any change of name would certainly be for the better. Heretofore some embarrassment has been felt in the matter of finding a good substitutional name. A party name ought to be characteristic. It ought to express something. It is not doubted that the name democratic, as interpreted by long association with gross political blunders and follies, does convey a very adequate idea of the party's make-up; but then the conduct of the party, through many years, and the materials of which it is composed, have made that name extremely objectionable. A happy circumstance has now brought about an opportunity under which the name of the party can be changed with great propriety and advantage. As its all, in this supreme moment of its fate, is staked on the Philp forgery, it should be called the Philp party. From the efforts making here to propagate the Philp forgery, we cannot doubt that the party might be rallied with enthusiasm under the Philp standard to-morrow. Several of its active leaders here who have devoted their whole efforts for a week to pushing the Philp fraud, appear to be men of very fit capacity to found a great party on this noble basis.

GROVER AND KELLY AS CHINESE LOVERS.

While desperate democratic politicians and demagogues of smallest calibre are making prodigious efforts to mislead a class of our people upon the Chinese question, it is as well to inquire how it happens that the Chinese are amongst us. Under whose policy was their immigration begun and fostered? The policy of the democratic party. There is a history on this subject. The first treaty permitting the immigration of Chinese was negotiated during the presidency of Franklin Pierce. Under it Chinese began to flock into the country. Before the close of Pierce's term they appeared in Oregon—a fact proven by the only act that ever passed the Oregon legislature for protection of Chinamen. This act was passed on the 22d January, 1857. It was an act to grant special and extraordinary protection to Chinese mining in Oregon; and they were to have this protection upon paying the small tax of two dollars a month each. We quote the following sections:

Sec. 16. A Chinaman who comply with the requirements of this act shall be protected in their right to the mining claims BY ALL THE LAWS AND PRIVILEGES THAT PROTECT AMERICAN CITIZENS IN THEIR RIGHT TO WORK SAID MINES.

Sec. 17. If any person shall be charged with circulating fraudulent licenses, or shall alter any license and impose the same on any Chinaman, upon conviction thereof he shall be deemed guilty of forgery, and shall be imprisoned in the penitentiary not less than one nor more than ten years, and be fined in any sum not exceeding one thousand dollars, to be paid for territorial purposes.

What party was it that thus gave Chinese the right to take mining claims in Oregon, and assured them protection "by all the laws and privileges that protect and govern American citizens in their rights?" It was the democratic party then all powerful not only in the national government but in the then territory. And this act, let it be observed, is signed, "L. F. GROVER, speaker of the house of representatives," and JAS. K. KELLY, president of the council."

Now, then, who will say that it was the policy of the republican party that introduced Chinese among us and gave them protection? Here was the beginning of the business. Let Messrs. Grover and Kelly stand up and answer. It was their policy that gave this inducement to Chinese to come to Oregon and opened the way for the immigration that has since followed.

CONFIDENCE IN GEN. GARFIELD.

From the 8th of June last—the day General Garfield was nominated—till this moment the campaign against him has been an uninterrupted stream of calumny and vilification. It has but one day more to run. This remaining day will probably be improved, as all preceding ones have been, in a way to add strength to his cause and improve his chances of election. Under this villainous abuse he has grown stronger before the people every day. Ohio and Indiana established this fact, and the news from New York confirms it. All candid opinion tends to the conclusion that his election is assured.

Unless all signs are at fault the people of the United States are about to declare the same confidence in General Garfield that has so often been expressed by the people of his district and state. He has been elected a representative in congress for nine consecutive terms—four times since the charges were first brought against him on which this campaign of calumny has been based. Last year he was elected a senator of the United States by the unanimous vote of his party in the legislature. He it was who led the fight that beat Thurman; and he would take Thurman's seat in the senate in March next were it not for taking a still higher position.

In the late election his district, determined to vindicate him, gave the largest republican majority by nearly two thousand that it ever threw. These are facts which attest General Garfield's standing where he is best known. Calumny is powerless against such proofs of the confidence of a people.

BUSINESS MEN'S DAY.

Business men generally will, it is understood, close their places of business to-morrow. Their presence at the polls in large force would have a most wholesome effect. It is a well known fact that a great majority of the ... business men of Portland are republicans. ... interest is as all should be in maintenance of public order in securing an honest vote and ... the policy which gives quiet and prosperity to the country ... for each one ... a day to the work now before the country. ... Business men therefore, should be at the front to-morrow. This is no ordinary occasion. Nor is it an occasion which occurs so frequently as to furnish an excuse for omitting a duty. Election day this time should not be politicians' day, but business men's day. Let them look to it.

Gen. Hancock, sharing the scare of his party, runs more and more to drivel in his campaign talks. He now argues for a chance "in order that the books may be examined." This ... of getting up the democratic party as a judge of official honesty may be ... as a piece of ... [illegible] ... 1876 ... democratic party ... [illegible]

A ... [illegible] ... democratic party ... prejudice ... [illegible] ... for twenty years ... "the negro." ... the Union. The object of the party ... [illegible]

The Times of Chicago, the great independent democratic paper of that city, though it supports Hancock, utterly despises the Barnum-Philp-Morey business. With its usual enterprise it is going after the whole plot. It furnishes a revelation of Barnum's operations on Mrs. Morey, of Lynn, and her exposure of them, which is about as interesting reading as anything which has yet occurred in connection with this villainous and disgusting affair. At the east the whole thing has sunk into utter contempt, and Barnum is fooling away a good deal of money in attempting to carry the Pacific coast with such a mess of rubbish.

GEORGE B. CURREY.
ELISHA L. APPLEGATE.
CHANDLER B. WATSON.

See that plain white paper is used. An effort will doubtless be made to substitute tickets of tinted or colored paper in many places. Every possible trick and device will be employed by desperate and unscrupulous politicians to mislead unsuspecting voters. Proper care will defeat every attempt of the kind.

Betting is a style of argument in which we never indulge and we are pleased to notice that democratic stalwarts in Portland have suddenly become moralists on that subject. Bets offered on Saturday night, in sums of twenty to one thousand dollars, at all the principal places of public resort in Portland, that New York would go for Garfield, or that Garfield would be elected, found no takers. There is a wholesome remembrance of Indiana.

We are told by persons who know them that men from Washington territory who have taken up homestead claims over there, have come over to Portland and are waiting here to vote. These persons should understand that they not only run the risk of being arrested for illegal voting, but of losing their homesteads as well. All such can easily be detected, as their names can be found in the land office records and on the poll books as well.

The supreme court of the United States consists of 7 republicans and 2 democrats. There is a bill before a democratic congress to increase the number of justices to 23. If passed, and the democrats should secure the presidency, the court can be made to stand 14 democrats to 7 republicans. In that event all the constitutional amendments can be swept away.

Chairman Barnum frantically asks: "Can it be possible that in every state throughout this broad land the same methods can be brought to bear that were used in Ohio and Indiana?" Just the same, dear Barnum! Just the same! Republicans will vote, you know, where they have the chance of doing so without being driven from the polls by bulldozers.

The way the republicans of the northern states are waking up, as seen by the majorities in Indiana and Ohio, and by the tremendous energy of the New York campaign, should be a gentle intimation to our democratic brethren that the figures "329" are small figures to fool with.

Since the utter failure of the democratic campaign in the eastern states, the democratic managers must have begun to claim Oregon and California. One more step and they are in the ocean.

Rural New York is coming down to the city to-morrow 100,000 strong. At least that is the expectation and that is the reason why democrats in New York wont take bets except at odds of $1000 to $300.

Gen. Hancock's utter silence on the Chinese question is interpreted by the fact that the planters of the south want to import coolies, and he doesn't intend to be on the record against it.

The question is, how much Wade Hampton ought to receive for his services in turning himself in to an effective republican campaign document.

Lydia Maria Child died at Wayland, Mass., on the 20th of October. She was nearly 79 years of age. Her writings are very numerous.

The republican clubs of Portland will parade for the last time to-night. It will be a local affair purely, but no doubt very brilliant.

MONDAY MORNING, NOV. 1, 1880.

FIRST AS USUAL.—An irresponsible scribbler who for a few weeks past has found occupation on the equally irresponsible fiction's organ, and [illegible] his propensity to falsify upon almost every subject which he attempts to handle, and in the statement concerning the discharge of Mr. Fennel from the county clerk's office, he willfully perverts the truth as is his custom, by saying that Fennel was turned off because he joined in the democratic procession. The truth is that Fennel was only temporarily employed in the office during the absence of Mr. Cobb, who holds the place regularly, and was notified ten days before the democratic parade took place that Cobb would be back November 1st, and his (Fennel's) services could not be utilized in the office after that date. On this basis the democratic organ fabricated its foolish and absurd falsehood, but its statements have of late been generally characterized by such an entire absence of truth that no one puts the least confidence in it.

ARRESTS FOR OCTOBER.—Arrests by the police for the month just closed number as follows: Drunk and disorderly, 164; disorderly conduct, 16; driving over First street bridge, 1; deserters from the U.S. army, 2; discharging firearms in city limits, 1; using abusive language, 3; assault and battery, 6; disorderly by fighting, 15; assault with a dangerous weapon, 2; keeping opium house, 5; visiting opium house, 7; defacing buildings and the trees, 4; larceny, 6; soliciting for hotel without license, 2; burglary, 2; assault with intent to commit rape, 1; escaped prisoner recaptured, 1; contempt of court, 1; keeping bawdy house, 2; selling liquor without license, 1; convicts en route to penitentiary, [illegible]; threatening to kill, 2; carrying lumber on poles on sidewalk (the new ordinance), 2; committing nuisance, 1; military convicts en route to Alcatraz, 11. Arrests in October, 1879, 165.

MUNICIPAL OFFICERS.—Says the East Portland Indicator: "As the new official term of East Portland commences on November 1st, officers elect will obligate themselves to 'faithfully discharge' the duties of their respective offices for the year next succeeding. The officers elect are J. N. Sanders, recorder; W. F. Cowgill, treasurer; A. J. McEwan, assessor; Chas. Gallarneau, marshal; and C. Austin, street commissioner. Of these the recorder, treasurer and assessor are re-elected; and Chas. Gallarneau takes the place of Ross Merrick as marshal, and C. Austin that of J. Jeremiah as street commissioner. In addition to these, the appointive offices of attorney and surveyor will most likely occupy the attention of the board of trustees on Monday evening. For these positions the present incumbents will probably be re-elected.

"GOT LEFT."—Early yesterday morning three well known nimrods—R. E. Bybee, Fred Daley and [illegible] Terry—chartered the lively little steam launch Gold Dust and started down the river. They were landed at what is known as Gilbert's place, some 16 miles below this city. The understanding was that the steamer should call for them at 5 o'clock. However the Gold Dust touched there at 4:30, half an hour early. The hunters did not put in an appearance and the boat steamed away, leaving the trio to get home the best way they could. As there is no one living near that point the probabilities are that the hunters had to pass the night in the woods, which, considering the state of the weather, was not very agreeable.

GETTING ALONG WELL.—One day last week a teamster named Henry Griffin, who resides in [illegible] addition, East Portland, was thrown from a heavily loaded truck at the corner of Main and [illegible] streets, and run over. He was conveyed to his home and medical aid invoked. At first it was feared that Griffin had sustained fatal injuries. Upon examination it was ascertained that no bones were fractured, though the jaw and back of the head were badly bruised. One of his ankles was also painfully bruised. No serious fears need be entertained, as he is getting along nicely, and will soon be out. He is an Odd Fellow, and the members of that order are extending all needful assistance.

BOX FOUND.—At the time that an alarm of fire was sounded last Thursday morning, it was found that box 7, at the corner of East Park and Jefferson streets, had been detached from the post and taken away. Of course, when the connection was disturbed the big bell gave one stroke. Search was made for the missing box, but it was not found until Saturday evening, it was found lying on the sidewalk at the corner of East Park and Clay streets—just one block away. What motive could have prompted any person to steal the box must remain a matter of conjecture.

DEATH OF MRS. ROBERTS.—Mrs. Rose Birrie, beloved wife of George B. Roberts, departed this life at [illegible], W. T., Oct. 25. Mrs. Roberts was a native of Scotland, but for 25 years past, her home has been on this coast. She was a sister of James [illegible], Esq., who at an early day was connected with the Hudson's Bay Co. and is still remembered by many of our citizens. Deceased was a lady of culture, of most kindly, benevolent disposition, and living a consistent Christian life. Her end was peace, and she rests from her labors.

FAREWELL SERMON.—Rev. A. S. Coats, who has had the pastorate of the First Baptist church for several years, has resigned the same and will leave for some other charge. Yesterday Dr. Lambert occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist and at the close of the morning service announced that Rev. Mr. Coats would deliver his farewell sermon next Sunday. Mr. Coats has filled the pastorate of the church with acceptability, and during his residence in Portland has greatly endeared himself to the members of his congregation.

THE CARBON HILL COAL MINES.—Mr. R. D. Chandler, proprietor of the newly discovered coal mines at Carbon Hill, 30 miles from New Tacoma, left on the Columbia for San Francisco to purchase additional machinery. He informs us that the extension of the Northern Pacific railroad from Wilkeson to the mines, a distance of four miles will be finished within four weeks. He expects to begin extensive coal shipments by December 1st. The coal company's new saw mill is in operation and is turning out lumber in great quantities.

ADJUDGED INSANE.—About a week ago the night foreman at the car shops, named Robert Kirkham, began to act a little strange and finally became so queer that he was discharged and another person put in his place. Saturday Kirkham was arrested on a charge of lunacy and brought before the proper authorities for examination. Judge Rice pronounced him insane and caused papers to be issued for his commitment to the asylum.

MARRIED.—Capt. Archie Pease, son of Capt. Geo. Pease, was married yesterday afternoon to Miss [illegible] Stevens of Oysterville, at the residence of Mr. [illegible] Tibbetts, corner of East Park and C streets, Rev. T. L. Eliot officiating. The ceremony was witnessed by only a few family relatives and friends, who, after congratulations, partook of an elegant lunch. Capt. and Mrs. Pease have the best wishes of a host of friends.

NEW PARSONAGE.—The new parsonage for the M. E. church of East Portland, one story and a half, is nearing completion, and will be ready for occupancy in a week or ten days. It is located on the estate of Mr. Murray, on the Powell valley road, about a quarter of a mile from the eastern limits of the city, a location both desirable and convenient.

FOR THE RELIEF SOCIETY.—The comedy, "Every-body's Friend" will be given for the benefit of the Ladies' Relief Society, instead of the orphanage, as heretofore announced. Friday, the 12th inst. has been fixed as the date of the performance.

COMING.—Prof. E. C. Taylor, the well-known magician, who visited Portland several years ago, will be in Portland in a few days. He has engaged New Market Theater for one week commencing next Friday evening, Nov. 5th.

DID NOT CROSS.—A dispatch from Astoria yesterday states that the steamer Columbia arrived there at [illegible] She proceeded to the bar at once and finding it too rough to cross, returned to Astoria.

INTERNATIONAL GOOD TEMPLARS.—Bethel Home Lodge No. 1, I. O. G. T. of the world, at 7:30 this evening, cor. D and Third streets.

ARRIVED.—The steamer Oregon arrived here yesterday afternoon with a full freight and a large number of passengers.

POLITICAL NOTES.

There will be a grand republican demonstration at Forest Grove this evening. Fire works have been provided, and other [illegible] with speaking and a fine parade.

Captain Darragh, a staunch republican, and Mr. Morris, formerly of East Portland, have been doing splendid service at the Upper Cascades during the campaign.

All members of the Young Men's Republican Club will meet at the hall of the Y. M. R. C. this Monday evening at 7 o'clock sharp to participate in the torchlight procession.

Hon. John F. Caples addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting at the Upper Cascades on Friday evening and, in connection with Hon. W. D. Hare, will address the people of Astoria this evening.

A rousing republican meeting was held at Lafayette Saturday evening. The meeting was addressed by J. [illegible], Esq., and Judge L. B. Stearns. Excellent music was furnished by a band and glee club. The meeting was largely attended and quite enthusiastic.

The Garfield Cadets, composed of the best of the young men of the city, will parade Monday evening. All members, and those who desire to participate in the procession, are requested to report to the captain or aids at headquarters, Union block, at 7 o'clock sharp, that evening.

Betting is an [illegible] that it is [illegible] of a great many democrats who [illegible] any confidence in their cause. It is significant therefore that they will nowhere wager a dollar on Hancock, except at great odds. They refuse to wager anything in New York, either on the State or the general result. In Portland republicans who have gold coin and anybody to match it. It has been tried over and over, for days past. Money has been waiting at the Holton house, and is there yet, in any sums that may be wanted; but the stalwart democrats pass by without investing. In fact no bluster will induce any one of them to cover even one hundred dollars.

Under the auspices of the several Garfield and Arthur clubs of this city and East Portland, a rousing demonstration will be given here this evening. This will be the parting blow of the campaign, and the republicans propose to make it a good solid one. There will be a torchlight procession, composed of the several local clubs of Portland and East Portland. The procession will form at 7:30 under direction of Capt. B. B. Tuttle, Grand Marshal, assisted by his chief aid, Geo. C. Sears, and after marching through several of the principal streets of the city will halt at Turn Halle, where speakers will be in attendance. As Turn Halle will be inadequate to accommodate the large crowd, the court house has been also engaged. After Turn Halle is filled to its capacity, the remainder of the procession will march to the court house. A number of prominent speakers will address both meetings.

THE NEW CITY CHARTER.

Its Provisions as Regards Police Commissioners and Assessor go into Effect at Once.

Saturday Mr. R. L. Durham, city auditor and clerk, received from the office of the secretary of state a certified copy of the charter of the city of Portland, as amended by the last legislature and approved by the governor. It has been generally understood that it would not go into effect until after the next city election, but the reading of the document shows that it goes into effect immediately, as indicated by the emergency clause, which reads as follows:

Sec. 26. [illegible] This act shall take effect and be in force from and after its approval by the governor.

The act abolishes the office of police commissioners, and by virtue of the emergency clause, Messrs. Taylor, Corbett and Hogue are now ex-police commissioners, and this department of the local government comes under the immediate supervision and control of the common council. While the act abolishes the commissioners, it also provides that no officer shall be appointed under the amended charter until the meeting of the common council in July, 1881. So while doing away with the further services of the police commissioners, the present police department cannot be interfered with until the time as above stated. The only change affecting the chief of police is the raising of his salary to $250 a month, but taking away all fees.

By the provisions of the new charter the office of city assessor is also made vacant, and the work now in progress under the supervision of Assessor Kelly is cut short, as he is legislated out of office eight months in advance of the term for which he was elected. The assessment roll will be made up by the city clerk from the records of the county and the incomplete work of Assessor Kelly.

SHOT AND KILLED.

Mr. L. W. Gilliland, bookkeeper at the First National bank, received Saturday a dispatch dated October 30, which conveyed to him the sad news that his brother Cyrus B. Gilliland, and a young man named William Moore, familiarly known as "Cob," at the camp in Blackport, Idaho, were killed a few days since. No particulars were given, as the sender, Mr. Willis, who is an uncle of Gilliland, knowing nothing, as he himself had only received a brief dispatch. C. B. Gilliland, the deceased, formerly resided in Portland, and will be well remembered by many citizens here. He was employed in the capacity of clerk in the drug store of T. A. Davis & Co., which house he left when it merged into that of Hodge, Davis & Co., two years ago. Cyrus was employed to drive cattle last summer from Yakima to Cheyenne, and was in camp when the shooting occurred. It is surmised that they must have been killed by Indians, as two young men could scarcely have shot each other accidentally. The parents of Cyrus reside near Roseburg. Mr. L. W. Gilliland departed yesterday morning on the steamer for Blackport for the purpose of bringing the body to this state for interment.

BRIEF NOTES.

BAPTIST CONVENTION.

Second Day.

The Baptist convention of the North Pacific coast met at 9 o'clock pursuant to adjournment.

Thirty minutes were devoted to religious exercises, led by Rev. W. C. McDaniel.

At 9:30 the president took the chair and the convention proceeded to business.

The first thing presented was the annual report of the missionary board. The report indicates that there has been raised on the field for state missions in the time $700. There have been in all two years eleven missionaries appointed, seven of whom are still under the employ of the board. The report speaks favorably of the committee of the Baptist Beacon, under the editorial management of Rev. W. J. Crawford, of Albany. The most [illegible] discussed was the plan of cooperation with this convention as proposed by the Home Mission Board of New York.

At first there was some misunderstanding in respect to the conditions of the plan, but after a full and earnest discussion of the subject the plan was heartily and unanimously adopted.

The conditions of the cooperative plan are briefly as follows: For every dollar actually paid to missionaries on this field, including Oregon, Washington and Idaho Territory, the home mission board of New York will give or expend on the same field two dollars. With this plan before the denomination there will probably be expended at least [illegible] during the next convention year.

The convention then adjourned until 2 o'clock P. M.

The Sunday school work was taken up at the time and reports were read from the following schools: Albany, The Dalles, Brownsville and Oak Creek.

The annual report of the Sunday school board was read, showing a growing interest in this great work. An interesting programme was taken up.

An excellent essay was given by Mrs. Henry Warren, of McMinnville, topic, "Foreign mission work in the Sunday school." Mrs. Warren's familiarity with foreign missions enabled her to present this subject in a touching way. So important was the subject as presented by the essay that it was ordered printed in the minutes.

A half hour was then spent very profitably in a discussion of the subject.

The convention next listened to an address from Rev. W. E. McJames, Sunday school missionary in Washington territory. His theme was "Books and papers—what kind and where from?" The discussion following showing a strong tendency to patronize Baptist publications for the sake of truth.

The convention then adjourned for the evening session.

In the evening an excellent programme was presented to the large and attentive audience.

Convention then listened to an address from Rev. S. C. Price of East Portland, upon the following theme: "How shall we educate the Sunday school of to-day in order to make most efficient the church of the future?" Being next in order the convention listened to a paper from Rev. G. J. Burchett of McMinnville; topic, "How may the teacher supplement the work of the pastor?" These subjects were followed by a general discussion by members of the convention.

The committee on religious exercises arranged for services in the city as follows: Sabbath morning, preaching at the Baptist church, by Rev. A. S. Coats; at the Congregational church, by Rev. S. C. Price; at the M. E. church, by Rev. G. J. Burchett; at the Presbyterian church, by Rev. W. J. Crawford; at the Evangelical church, by Rev. F. P. Davidson. Sabbath, 3 o'clock P. M., Woman's Missionary Society. So closed the labors of the second day.

NOTES FROM ALBANY.

Our Albany correspondent, under date of Saturday the 30th, sends us the following items of interest:

Wheat 71 per bushel, farmers selling only when necessitated.

The case of Frank Wheeler, indicted for the murder of Taylor, is now on trial with prospect of his being [illegible].

Mrs. Rebecca Fanning, venerable mother of Levi Fanning, of this vicinity, will be 90 years of age in January next. Who in Oregon is older?

Dr. E. L. Bryan, who lost his arm while sawing wood in this city with a horse machine, has so far recovered as to be able to return to his home near Tangent.

Rev. R. L. Stevens, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, has returned to Albany to stay. He recently purchased a nice residence near the Albany college that is already occupied.

Mr. James Elkins, after a protracted absence, has returned from Eastern Oregon. Exposure in that bracing air has given his countenance the usual bronzed tint, but none the less is all that.

Robert Carter died of typhoid fever at his house, near Albany, on Wednesday last. He was severely wounded while a soldier in the union army. He was an honest, reliable man and his death is universally lamented. He was near 40 years of age.

New buildings.—Thurston Hackleman is erecting a fine dwelling in the new east town. J. W. Blain, ditto, near the new Presbyterian church. Messrs. Sanders [illegible] will soon occupy their new brick store, corner of Broadalbin and First street. [illegible], painter, is putting on the finishing touches.

The M. E. parsonage was suddenly entered on Thursday evening by about fifty ladies and gentlemen bent on overpowering the pastor, Rev. J. Dillon, with their congratulations on the occasion of his birthday. They took with them plenty of refreshments and made the evening memorable for its pleasantness. Rev. P. P. Tower and J. H. Rook of Salem were among the visitors.

Circuit court for Linn county is in session, R. P. Boise, judge. The case of State of Oregon vs. Frank R. Compton for seduction under a promise of marriage came up for trial on the 28th inst., and was submitted to the jury yesterday. After being out about thirty minutes, they returned with a verdict of guilty. Matters were compromised, however, by Compton marrying the young woman and paying costs of prosecution.

We all Consider Iron the embodiment of strength and power, but how few are aware that it is the same element in the system that gives us strength and vigor, and that an insufficiency of it causes weakness and debility. The Peruvian Syrup, a protoxide of Iron, is prepared expressly to supply this vitalizing element.

MRS. WALLER & SON.

The Daily Oregonian.

MONDAY MORNING, NOV. 1, 1880.

MRS. BLYSTER'S ROMANCE.

Mrs. Sims' boarding school was a high building and it stood on a hill. My room was in its third story and I had often sat looking out over the city from its "sigolty" windows as Peggy, the maid called them. The hill was nearly conical in shape and terraced on two sides, my side being one of them. At the foot of the hill ran a broad, handsome street, and on a prominent corner of this street, in plain sight from my windows, stood a large, rambling old mansion, about which we girls had woven many a romance. We wondered who lived there. Ladies and gentlemen promenaded through its pleasant grounds; carriages rolled up to its wide gateway many times every day; professional looking gentlemen went in and out of it. What could it be?

One day I found out. There was great excitement that day in Mrs. Sims boarding school. I had been feeling ill for some days. My head ached and my tongue was dry and hot. The doctor said at last that I had the scarlet fever and must be removed at once. "Better take her home," he said. "She isn't fairly sick yet."

"Home," groaned Mrs. Sims; "Doctor, she lives in India!"

"Good gracious!" said the doctor, and he scratched his head thoughtfully. At last he said: "I have it! Here's Dr. Dolby's hospital right down here—just the place for her."

So I was wrapped up and driven to "Dr. Dolby's hospital," which proved to be no other than the dear, rambling, romantic old house which, with its wildly overgrown but delightful shrubbery, had so long been the object of our speculations.

They put me to bed in a large, quiet room. The open fire looked wonderfully pleasant. A quaint, old fashioned tea service, with cherubs and gilly flowers and various other incongruous designs on it in blue, sat spootingly on the round table at my bedside. Three or four easy chairs were mingled among the others, and in one of them, after I was nicely "tucked up" and ready to go to sleep, I beheld—yawning already and casting wishful eyes toward her own white cot near by—my buxom nurse, Mrs. Blyster, who had been engaged expressly for me.

How fat and good natured she looked! And how the white cot cracked when she finally sought repose!

The next morning I was worse, and for several days I tossed in delirium and pain, but by a week more the fever began to abate and Mrs. Blyster said, reassuringly:

"You hain't dead yet, Miss, and what's more you hain't a goin' to be—not with Sarah Blyster to see to ye!" Then good Sarah Blyster gave me a motherly kiss on my forehead, fumbled over my already painfully tucked-in bed clothing in an attempt to express still more forcibly her affectionate zeal for my welfare, and sat down with a sort of a good-natured grunt at the back window.

I closed my eyes, and was just about falling asleep when I was aroused by a half-suppressed sob.

"What's the matter?" I said, faintly. To see happy Mrs. Blyster sobbing in tears was too much for me.

"She's dead, miss; the woman 't lives in the little house back. They're a havin' her funeral this blessed minute."

"A friend of yours?" I was impressed almost to tears myself by Sarah Blyster's manner.

"Law, no!" said that lady, starting up and assuming her own radiant countenance again. "And what I'm a whinin' around here and givin' you the blues for, I'm sure I don't know. Cheer up, Sarah Blyster, cheer up!"

I smiled faintly and soon dropped off into the nap which Mrs. Blyster's sob had interrupted.

A day or two after Mrs. Blyster was "snivelin'," as she expressed it, again by the back window. I was stronger and better now, and asked, cheerfully:

"Not another funeral, I hope, Mrs. Blyster?"

"No," said that worthy lady, still unable to attain her wonted serenity; "but there's a boy—her boy, I s'pose—a-workin' much inside, and he—and he—he's a shakin' out her clo'es and a-foldin' 'em up, and it does seem 's if some o' the female relatives oughter be a-helpin' of 'em."

Surely it did. There was considerable pathos in the way of stating it, in spite of the "female relatives," which only showed that Mrs. Blyster had mingled much in scenes of woe herself and knew how they ought to be conducted.

"I wouldn't look that way," I said, soothingly; "try the other window."

"I did," said Mrs. Blyster, "but my eyes would go that way somehow—everything shows so plain from here. There was a black alpaca, as good as new. I see her out in it the very day I come here to take care of you. She took sick the very next day, I reckon, for I see her curtain down and the doctor there, and now I think she's dead, and there's that alpaca dress a remindin' them." And Mrs. Blyster sobbed again.

I had been sitting up for some time. "I'll lie down, now, Mrs. Blyster," I said, hoping to divert the good creature from her sorrowful reflections. And in arranging my bed and getting the cherubs and gillyflowers set in order for my tea she forgot the alpaca dress and its departed owner.

But only temporarily, for, two or three days after, sitting solemnly and almost tearfully again by the window, she began in the tone which people use when they are telling the "particulars."

"You jest orter see them, miss"—for I utterly refused to glance in the direction of the grief stricken house—"it's so touchin' like. He's a siften the ashes now, miss. She done it the first day we come. She had on an old caliker—they gave it to the woman next door afterward; and then she slicked up her kitchen and put on the alpaca and went out a-callin' or somethin'. She seemed to think a lot of her neighbors and they of her. I see they had a houseful at the funeral."

"Mercy!" I exclaimed, quite out of patience with Sarah Blyster's trying disposition. "You shouldn't be looking in at their windows, Mrs. Blyster; it isn't polite."

"Humph," said the good soul, with some spirit. "I ain't a-looking in their windows. I see it all without lookin'; can't help seein', they're so close and low like; and I've seen a sight of trouble and death, and it ain't to me as it is to a giddy young thing like you," and with this "crusher" Mrs. Blyster went out to take my tray.

The next day the doctor sent her out to take a walk and she came in radiant.

"I went by the front o' that little house, you know, where she died a fortnit ago. Jest as clean, as you never see! Them two men must a' scrubbed the steps and front theirselves. An' such a nice rag carpet on the front-room floor, an' the clock a tickin' on the mantel shelf. My! it must be awful-lone some without her!" And Mrs. Blyster drew her face down dolefully.

Ah, la! Mrs. Blyster's heart was getting enlisted. The dear old house, if it was only a hospital, was not goin' to be without its romance after all.

"He goes to his shop every mornin'," said Mrs. Blyster, irrelevantly, as she brightened up the fire a day or two later.

"He? Who?" I asked, stupidly.

Mrs. Blyster started like a child caught at the cookies.

"I jest see that man over there," and she nodded in the direction of the back window. "I see him a splittin' some kin'lins an' then a goin' off to his work. I rather guess he's a carpenter, but mebbe its a mason, or mebbe its a shoemaker."

"Sure enough!" I rejoined. But what difference does it make to you, Mrs. Blyster?"

"Law!" said Mrs. Blyster, bridling; "you haven't no interest in your fellow bein's. Now here's a poor man, as likely a man as I've seen this many a long day, gone and a-lost his wife—the dearest creetur to him prob'ly in the world." And Mrs. Blyster's voice choked up. "And you haven't no more sympathy with him than nothin' in the world."

There was an eloquence of reproach in this which quite silenced me—though I feebly protested my innocence—and the subject was dropped.

Sunday, however, was the grand day for Mrs. Blyster's observation, for then the "inexpressive he"—it was a real trial to her that she did not know his name—was at home ai day. She speculated on his name a great deal.

"There's a bearin' about his mien," said that lady with some sentiment, "that seems to sorter show he hain't got no common name; now I know he hain't got no name like Smith."

"I'm afraid we never shall know," I said, soberly; "I'm getting well very fast, Mrs. Blyster."

"Yes, you be!" said the good soul, giving me an affectionate hug. "Yes, you be; an' I'm glad enough; if it do put me out of a job. But likely the doctor 'll get me here again."

"Oh, yes!" I said; "but what do you think that man's name is now?"

Mrs. Blyster returned to the subject with evident alacrity.

"Likely 'taint nothin' like Perkins?" she said interrogatively. The Perkinses were a great family who lived near by in a grand mansion.

"You know I haven't seen him," I said, half ashamed of having drawn out the dear old creature just for my own amusement. "Perhaps it might be Crippen." The Crippens lived further down the street and though not so aristocratic as the Perkinses, had still claims to consideration.

"That just about suits him," said good Mrs. Blyster, with some enthusiasm. "Mr. Crippen! That sounds quite like him. I declare I'm ashamed at my age, but rainy as 'tis I could really almost put on my gums and go out. I feel so kinder anxious to git hold of his name."

I couldn't help laughing. "Mrs. Blyster," I said, "I do hope you will know some day, and if I ever find out I'll tell you."

Something in my manner quite injured her feelings.

"I s'pose you think I'm silly," she said, in a hurt way; "but, indeed, he's a nice man."

"I know he is, dear Mrs. Blyster," I said penitently. "And I'm every bit in earnest, and I want you to promise to make me some of that famous toast of yours to-night. Alas! I fear I shan't have much more of it"—for I was almost well. This cleared good Mrs. Blyster's face in a moment, and she hastened to set out the cherubs and gillyflowers and ran to get the toaster.

Two days later I was to go. The bills were paid and the carriage was ordered, and Sarah Blyster and I were sitting before the pleasant fire, having a farewell chat, when suddenly in burst one of the maids.

"Mrs. Blyster," she said, in an agitated voice, "the doctor wants you right away. There's a carpenter lives back here on the little back street, and he's fell off a roof. Oh! it's awful. I saw him, and mebby he'll get well an' mebby he won't."

Mrs. Blyster's rosy face grew perceptibly paler and her comfortable hand felt cold as it touched mine.

"It's him, miss. Mr. Crip——" she checked herself, "but likely that ain't his name. And, miss, I do believe there's a Providence in it, and here I'm a goin' to find out his name without a havin' to put on my gums at all; but, mercy!" for she had suddenly realized that this was no time to ruminate. "I hope he ain't a goin' to die. He ain't if good nursin' 'll save him!" Good-by, miss—yes I'll call up to Simses sometimes. Bless your heart," and Mrs. Blyster was gone.

So I went back again to school. The fever had not spread, and everything was as quiet and stupid as ever. Sometimes letters came, and I spent the vacation with my mother's friends in a distant place. I forgot almost that I had ever had the scarlet fever or had been under the care of good, efficient Mrs. Blyster. The fall term begun and Thanksgiving was close upon us when Peggy entered my room one day and handed me a card upon which was printed, "Mrs. Sarah Blyster."

Then it all came back to me, and I rushed into the reception room to give the good creature a loving embrace—which quite upset her, and made her wipe her kindly, susceptible eyes—and to ask the first thing: "How's the carpenter that was hurt?"

Mrs. Blyster blushed violently, and said with a simper,

"You hain't a-forgot, sure's I live."

"Of course I haven't," I said warmly. "I take a great deal of interest in my fellow-beings, in spite of your thinking I don't. How is he?"

"Law, miss, he wan't hurt so awful bad still," raising her eyebrows and looking serious, "he was pretty sick for awhile, and broke a little bone in his foot, which makes him rather lame."

"But what's his name?" I interrupted, impatiently.

"That's it," said Mrs. Blyster, impressively. "Wasn't it strange enough you should a-said Crippen? I knew 'twant no common name, and it ain't. It's Crimpton; now don't that sound mostly like Crippen?"

"It does, indeed," I said, trying to look as amazed as I felt that I ought to. "But how did you get along?"

"Oh!" blushing again, "we got along first rate, and that's what I come to tell you. We—that is—well, miss, I declare," and good Mrs. Blyster looked like a fifteen-year old girl with her first beau. "I come a-expectin' to ask you if you would do us the honor, you havin' a-known all the circumstances from the start, to—to—"

"To what?" I cried, as interested as Mrs. Blyster herself.

"Well, if you must know—it's a pleasant room, you know, with the rag carpet and clock a-tickin', and we're goin' to be married there Thanksgivin' day. 'Taint been a year yet, but he needs me, bein' lame, you know—and mebbe you'll come to the weddin'?"

You may be sure that I went.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—There has been a marked falling off in demand for most classes of merchandise during the past week, consequent upon the lateness of the season also in a great measure to the absorbing interest of the presidential campaign. Barley has been in good demand at higher figures, closing firm.

NEW YORK FREIGHT MARKET.

[SPECIAL TO THE OREGONIAN.]

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.—There is very little doing in [illegible] consequent upon the interest attaching to the presidential election, and no doubt it will be a full week before attention is again given to business. The bark Santa Lucia is closing out and will sail early in the coming week. Rates remain unchanged, but with prospect of increased tonnage berthed and competition for freight and desire to get off chartered vessels, rates are a shade easier. [illegible] freights more active than for some time, agents having secured shipments of several lots of canned goods by contract with sailing ships. Freights at Boston are fairly active, and the Emily H. Whitney is doing a good business. Railroad freights at Boston are quite lively, with shipments of 100 cs crackers, 80 cs yeast powders, 25 pkgs tins, 150 cs canned goods, 175 bbls cranberries, 500 pkgs fish, 50 coils rope, 175 kegs horseshoes.

At Philadelphia the market is less active, and the George Stetson rags. However, she will get away the coming week, and will be followed by the El Sar McNeil, who will have a lot of railroad iron as part cargo.

such as SPERMATORRHEA, or SEMINAL WEAKNESS, or LOSS OF PERFECT VITALITY. Nearly two-thirds of all the Chronic Diseases spring, either directly or indirectly, from some derangement of the sexual system, and yet this subject is neglected by the majority of the Medical Profession.

I know that persons who are unfortunate enough to be afflicted by any form of sexual disease have a delicacy in calling upon the proper physician in time, from a sense of modesty and sometimes from ignorance, and permit those diseases to exist until their constitutions become corrupted, their organization broken down and the hope of future happiness blighted, until death becomes a welcome messenger to carry them out of their miserable existence.
